Article Title

Bluetooth may not work well enough to trace coronavirus contacts Read more: <https://www.newscientist>

Article Content

The UK's upcoming contact tracing app aimed at limiting the future spread of coronavirus may not be an effective tool for identify whether users have had close contact with someone carrying the virus, and should not seen as a panacea, according to a study of how Bluetooth signals work in real world situations.

The app, which is being trialled on the Isle of Wight and due for nationwide release later this month, was described this week by the government's
